Ford Foundation Awards $450,000 to RACE Project

The Black Voice News

RIVERSIDE

Yolanda Moses co-chairs advisory board that will develop a smaller version of the original traveling museum exhibit

Dr. Yolanda Moses

The Ford Foundation has awarded a $450,000 grant to the American Anthropological Association's "RACE: Are We So Different?" project, a traveling museum exhibit for which anthropology professor Yolanda Moses is a curator.

The new grant will fund the development of a smaller version of "RACE: Are We So Different?" for display in smaller venues, and a companion book. The Ford Foundation previously contributed $1 million to help create the $4 million exhibit.

The new Ford Foundation grant will enable development of an exhibit which

More Inland Workers Taking Second Jobs for Economic Reasons

LAG WIDENS IN INCOME

The Black Voice News

MORENO VALLEY

By Chris Levister

On a recent morning N'zinga Raoul of Moreno Valley reported at 8 a.m. to her full-time job in Corona where she earns $10.50 an hour supervising workers with mental and physical disabilities as they assemble kitchen appliances.

She moved effortlessly around a tangle of hoses and conveyor belts making sure her charges had enough parts, helped those in wheelchairs, re-ordered supplies and completed an overdue production report.

At 3:30 p.m. Raoul drove home to change into a red vest for her part-time minimum wage job as a cashier at a Riverside department store. Her 14-year-old son was studying and helping his younger sister with her homework. Raoul grabbed a slice of cold pizza and a bottle of water from the refrigerator and raced to her eight year old sub-compact car in the driveway.

"God, I forgot to hug them," she said fastening her seatbelt. "I'll make up for it when I get home tonight."

Raoul arrived home around 10:30 p.m. in time to say goodnight to the children and eat another slice of cold pizza before falling asleep on the sofa in front of the television.

She was scheduled to be back at her job in Corona at 8 a.m. the next day.

"I have no choice but to work a second job. I need the money," said Raoul, who

Educator and Family Advocate Honored for Women's History Month

The Black Voice News

SAN BERNARDINO

Lois Carson, the first African American woman elected to the Board of Trustees of the San Bernardino Community College District, had a hard time persuading other trustees that campuses needed child care services in the early 1980s.

"That was difficult with a board of six males who didn't understand that the world had changed and that women were going to work and needed child care," says Carson of San Bernardino, whose efforts led to child care centers opening on two campuses. "Women weren't going to school on a lark. The economy had forced them to go to work."

Carson, executive director of the Community Action Partnership of Riverside County since 1980, was recognized as 2008 Woman of the Year in the 62nd District by Assembly Member Wilmer Amina Carter (D-Rialto) for her pioneering work in education and helping lower-income families improve their lives. In recognition of Women's History Month at the State Capitol, Carson was recently honored with award recipients from all 80 Assembly Districts in a formal ceremony on the floors of the Senate and Assembly.

"Education and helping disadvantaged people has been a big part of Lois Carson's life," Assembly Member Carter says. "She knows how hard she has to work in a position that impacts the lives of so many young people. She is someone that young people can learn from and admire."

Lois Carson said she was proud to accept an award that recognizes women for achievement and community service. "I am honored. I believe in women's issues and women pushing the frontiers of opportunity."

She is the national recipient of the 2007 Lyndon Baines Johnson Human Services Award from the National Community Action Partnership. She has been active in National Council of Negro Women, the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Inc., U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, Accrediting Commission for Community and Junior Colleges and the United Way.

Lois Carson is also chair of the statewide Disaster Planning Committee for the California State Department of Community Services and Development, and has served on the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Monitoring and Assessment and Information Systems Task Forces.

She holds a bachelor's degree from Cal State, San Bernardino and two masters' degrees from UC Riverside. Both Cal State San Bernardino and UC Riverside have honored her as a Distinguished Alumnus.

"I PICKED MYSELF UP OFF THE FLOOR AND LEFT THE PROFESSION"

Former First Year Teacher Recalls Anguish Of 2003 Layoff

The Black Voice News

INLAND EMPIRE

By Chris Levister

Kimberly King didn't become a school teacher for the pay.

She certainly didn't like the long hours of preparation after school, the mandated testing of students over teaching them how to think, spending her own money for school supplies, the incessant focus on immigrant English learners, the ever present discipline problems or even the bickering among teachers and administrators.

King loved teaching because it was the only job she's ever had that "made me appreciate the power of character. Character is a diamond that scratches every other stone. I had the power to turn struggling students into gems." Then first year teacher King persevered in one of Santa Ana's toughest schools.

"There was no doubt in my mind I'd found my niche. I fully expected to retire as a teacher," said King, until May 2003 when she found a layoff notice in her mailbox.

"I was in a state of shock. I opened the letter very slowly hoping it was some kind of mistake. It began: "It is with sincere regret that I am writing to inform you...your services will not be required for the 2003-2004 school year."

She says the layoff notices landing in thousands of California teachers' mailboxes this month as districts brace for millions in state cuts is troubling.

"It's testimony to the fragile state of Kimberly King in happier times as a Santa Ana middle school teacher. Today she's selling text books to school districts.

public education in America in general and in California in particular."

She points to a 2005 RAND Report which shows California's public school system lags behind most of the nation on almost every objective measurement of student achievement, funding, teacher qualifications and school facilities. California ranks 47th in the nation in per-pupil spending, that's unethical," says King.

The report makes the scope of the California's education crisis crystal clear, says King. "People seem to forget the emergency budget cuts and hand wringing is old hat for thousands of veteran teachers, many of whom have grown tired and left the profession."

In 2003 that's just what King did. "I cried for days - then I picked myself up off the floor, and traded my #2 pencils for a job selling text books to school districts."

An experience she calls insulting and painful. "I had worked so hard that first year. Then there were the long hours of preparation for certification. I felt like I was turning my back on the students. I came from a family of teachers. My new husband is a teacher. My mother was a teacher."

King says she's not bitter but worried that as layoff warnings land in new teacher's mailboxes many will follow her out of the profession.

"Public schools have become the sacrificial lamb," laments King. She said when the budgets get out of whack the ax falls on schools first.

King appears visibly agitated when the discussion turns to the so-called schools accountability movement of

"It was one of the few things Mr. Bush did right. He put the failure of public education in America on the national agenda."

She credits "No Child" with forcing states to invest billions in developing higher academic standards and tests aimed at holding schools accountable.

King claims 'No Child' became mired in political infighting and ultimately left a lot of states scrambling to pay for mandated programs while at the same time the federal government cut funding to schools.

"You can't blame the governor, his job is to balance the state's budget. But at the end of the day it's the students who will suffer. Many lawmakers ignore the fact that it's not their dreams being shattered. "It's our children's."

In urban school districts like San Bernardino and Rialto, where many of the students read below the national average and the four year drop-out rate reaches 70 percent at some high schools, retaining dedicated teachers is paramount at any cost - "even if it means raising taxes," said King.

King points to a photograph on her desk. "That's me in happier times," she smiles with pride. A quote etched on the frame reads: "Character is that which reveals moral purpose, exposing the class of things a man chooses or avoids"...Aristotle

Wendy McCammack and City Council Send Bad Signal

I started working on this editorial Monday morning to commend the Common Council of the City of San Bernardino for the establishment of a Youth Advisory Commission. I commend them because this is far from where the council was several months ago when it comes to their relationship with youth. One council member, Neil Derry, had even told youth under 18 that their opinions or actions did not matter to the city. Several others, by their silence, went along with that statement so the perception to the public was youth issues do not matter. So I was pleased to see the council agree in February to the 19 member Youth Commission. The youth commissioners will serve a one year term and are appointed by the Mayor and Common Council. The idea is to give them a platform and a voice at the local government level on the decisions which impact children and youth.

So as I worked on my commendation, I was surprised to go home on Monday afternoon and turn on the television to watch the council meeting in session only to hear Councilwoman Wendy McCammack call the school board and district staff a bunch of "liars." The statement was made after an agenda item was requested by the Superintendent of Schools Dr. Arturo Delgado to postpone the agenda item regarding the opening of another elementary school. I could not believe my ears, when I heard Council member Wendy McCammack object to the request and call the school board and district staff liars and said they could not be trusted. She went on to allege the district did not need the school and accused the school board of misleading the council in the past.

Now how many of you know when a district wanted to build a school that was not needed? Sometimes the data on student population presented to build, procure funding and maneuver through lengthy permit processes, might seem to be out of step with the current data, but to call them liars is going a bit far. McCammack even said the building of the school would reduce the tax base by removing homes that now pay taxes.

Mayor Morris and former Colton school board member - now council member - Tobin Brinker cautioned the council that this was not the right signal to send another public elected body that the city will need cooperation on future projects. I want to remind the council that this is the body that trains our future workforce and leaders. The school district is also one of the largest employers in the city. Many other businesses exist in this city because of the school district. This same council member is always talking about attracting businesses and one of the first things businesses want to know is how are the schools? This is where the employees' children will be educated. Their employees will want to live in neighborhoods close to their neighborhood school. If your city doesn't have the schools, the families will then live in other cities that cooperate with the school district.

I have also noticed that Council member McCammack has questions about most agenda items. It is as though she is prompted by other people not at the council table to surface certain issues. Then she will hit a word blockage and look into the audience and ask, what word am I looking for? That is alright but most of the questions are designed or framed to embarrass another colleague or staff member who is making a presentation.

The bottom line of all this McCammack discussion is with the ugliness displayed and the short-sighted members on the council "Thank God" the schools can proceed without city approval to build a school to serve our youth.

Obama Speech On Race Last Week

First, let me say last week's Barack Obama speech is worth reading again and again.

I am about the same age as Rev. Jeremiah Wright and we have a lot in common when it comes to our treatment and old sayings here in America. I don't know where he grew up but I can tell he heard a lot about growing up on the farm, even though he might be from the city. I grew up under government sanctioned vigorously enforced legalized "Jim Crow" Laws in North Carolina. I also grew up having to raise chickens from eggs after sending off and getting baby chicks from mail order catalogs. One of the things you learn quickly about chickens is that if you feed them in the morning they will wander all day into the woods and other places you don't want them to go, but at night "They (chickens) Will Come Home To Roost," its their nature.

I did not hear all of Rev. Wright's message but I am very familiar with the saying about chickens coming home to roost, especially in his reference to Osama bin Laden's actions. According to a CNN Special Report several years ago, our government had a special relationship with Bin Laden and his Saudi family, and we helped train him in war strategies. We even trained Saddam Hussien and gave him some chemical agents to use against Iran. If I am wrong in my recount of our relationship with these individuals and leaders, I want CNN to correct me. Just like the chicken will come home after you feed them over a period of time, Barack Obama's speech showed us how race in this country has defined who we are.

The people of my generation love America, fought for America, and even as America denied us our civil rights in this country we have built with our blood, sweat, tears and life with 400 years of free labor.

My younger brother Charles Donnie Brown once told me a story about something that happened to him during the 1960's when he was wearing his U.S. Marine uniform in the south. He was dancing in what we called back then a "honky tonk" juke joint with a White woman. He was there with some of his White Marine friends from the north and not familiar with southern beliefs on the fraternizing of the races, especially between Black men and White women. Some White male patrons got angry with my brother and threatened to take him on because he was Black. Donnie said he started talking another language as though he was from another country and they left him alone.

That Black experience, during the 40's, 50's and 60's, does give me a different view on America than my children who grew up in California or my wife from Pennsylvania. Even though today, according to Governor Ed Rendell of Pennsylvania, he has a state full of White people who will not vote for an African American regardless of their qualification and ability to bring a healthy economy to his state. He should know he is White and from Pennsylvania, plus he's a Democrat.

Obama's point to America is we now stand at another crossroads with a great opportunity to break the shackles that have kept us attached while yet separated as citizens living in the same country. Andrew Hacker, author of "Two Nations, One White One Black, Separate and Unequal" point to the same conclusion. It is no mystery to those of us who see the many contradictions in our policies and treatment of other nations while boasting about how we stand for fair treatment of all citizens.

Let us embrace those different views of our country and move forward. None of us are traitors or love America less because of how we have been treated by our government.

So in my opinion let us take this opportunity to sit down with one another and share our experiences of growing up in a country that is moving toward a more perfect union. Let us discuss the real issues and real enemies of America including those in the White House now. Let us discuss why our gas is so high and unregulated or why big business is making unprecedented profits at the expense of working Americans and why we are shipping jobs out of the country and laying off Americans. Like Obama said all of us are being taken advantage of on this race issue while our real enemy in making plans to continue to keep control.

Barack Obama's Pastor

Gotta be fair. Gotta put the shoe on the other foot. If John McCain had gone to the same church all his adult life, had embraced the pastor as a mentor and friend, even naming his book after one of the pastor's sermons - then let's say that that pastor had at least once preached that all abortionists are going to hell, that Democrats are nothing but a bunch of gay-loving... blah, blah, you get the idea.

Well, what would I do? Would I show restraint and say to myself, "Aww, come on. It was just one sermon. If you judged every pastor by everything he said any time he stepped into the pulpit, why, most churches would be empty." Nope. I'd show no restraint. I'd print up that sermon as fast as I could and show it to my friends as evidence that John McCain is nothing but a right-wing reactionary in a moderate's clothing. I would also hope that these friends hadn't been to church as often as me, and that they never had to sit through sermons in which men they deeply respected had said stupid and regrettable things.

But why bother with honesty when you can win one for Our Side! Here's for stretching the facts! One, two, three, Whoo-Hoo!

primary elections. I don't see any other solutions that are fair and honor the commitment that two and a half million voters made in the Democratic primaries in those two states." There is, of course, a third option: Stick to the rules that were agreed upon prior to the campaign.

The legislators of both Florida and Michigan were warned that the change in the primary date would result in disqualification and a refusal to seat their delegates at the convention in Denver. With the exception of Dennis Kucinich, all of the Democratic contenders signed pledges that read "I _____, Democratic Candidate for President, pledge I shall not campaign or participate in any state which schedules a presidential election primary or caucus before Feb. 5, 2008, except for the states of Iowa, Nevada, New Hampshire and South Carolina..."

The states went ahead with the changes feeling fairly confident that the eventual nominee would seat their convention delegates anyway and all would be forgiven. Of course, neither the Michigan or the Florida legislature or any of the candidates imagined that no candidate would march into Denver without the requisite number of delegates to carry the nomination or enough nominating committee delegates to force the nomination.

So now Mrs. Clinton wants a do over. Perhaps in the interest of time and money, the vote can be held by mail. A mail in vote in Florida? The dead will truly walk again...right down to the post office to mail in their ballots.

I am also unsure of how this is fair to the candidates that chose not to campaign in the states and are now no longer in the race. Admittedly, their campaigns were having difficulty gaining traction, but to borrow from the world of sports, "that's why they play the game."

Further, given the rather even distribution of pledged delegates, a new primary in both states would be more or less a wash. What would not be a wash is the super delegate tally. Recent analysis suggests that a do over might gain as many as 25 super delegates for Clinton, enough to gain a foothold in influencing the nomination process in Denver.

Seems fair.

Rules are in place to maintain order. To seat either slate of delegates at this time is to make the rules meaningless. To hold a new primary is to allow the states to have their cake and eat it too. They sought greater influence and now they have it. What is to now prevent all states seeking greater influence from moving their primaries next time around? Absolutely nothing, which oddly enough was the reason the DNC imposed the rules to begin with.

What would be fair and honorable would be for both campaigns to go to Denver and negotiate. Changing the rules when it seems the quickest means to a desired end smacks of the same old tired politics that this party was promising to change.

In the Meantime....

high prices will continue in the years ahead.

In the meantime.....

Food prices are soaring! Anyone who goes to the grocery store on a regular basis, and by that I mean at least once a week, will tell you that in some stores prices are changing daily! Watch the faces of the elderly in the grocery store...they spend a long time in the staples sections deciding what they can purchase—bread or milk?

In the meantime.....

Home prices are dropping like a lead balloon, (for those who still have a home). Moreover, that back up plan we had to use our equity to help with college tuition, or to take care of our parents, or for our retirement, looks less and less likely.

Yes, there is a lot going on in our country.

It is imperative, at this point in our history, that we elect a President who 'gets it' and will change how business is done in Washington. In his well-received Philadelphia speech, A More Perfect Union, Senator Obama warns us "We can accept a politics that breeds division, and conflict, and cynicism... But if we do, I can tell you that in the next election, we'll be talking about some other distraction. And then another one. And then another one. And nothing will change....Or, at this moment, in this election, we can come together and say, "Not this time.""

The choice is a clear one for those with America's best interests. We will not be distracted...not this time....we've got too much to lose.

By Linnie Frank Bailey

As politicians and pundits volley around the wedge issues of race and religion—in their attempt to beat back the momentum of the Obama campaign—we are not putting the focus where it needs to be in this country. We are letting a mainstream media, which spends much of its time covering out-of-control celebrities, set the tone of our Democratic nominating process. We are letting inflammatory talk show hosts, spew division and dissension among American voters. We are watching Obama's Democratic opponent lead a scorched-earth campaign in which the party will be left in shambles if she does not get her way.

In the meantime.....

Our young men and women are being injured and killed daily in Iraq—this week the total hit 4000—and our national treasure (billions and billions) is being spent on a war that never should have been waged. It is estimated that the war is costing America $275 million a day! Money that could be spent on education, infrastructure, and health care.

In the meantime.....

Gas prices are spiraling and no one will tell us the truth about the global competition for oil (and food), and that even if fuel costs go down a bit soon,

The Truth

Complacency with the status quo has flourished throughout history. Women and men co-exist with evil and injustice in their everyday lives until a catalyst for change emerges. Small groups of brave people, and in some cases a single individual, take a stand imparting honesty and revealing the truth. These ripples of hope collectively turn the tide of human struggle.

Proceeding my own lifetime, I have learned that the people of the Inland Empire have chosen silence and compromise over truth and action. Through tacit acceptance of elected officials that operate to the detriment of our community we have allowed their continued presence in our lives. This must cease if we are to welcome positive and substantive change to our community.

Why won't anyone tell the truth about Congressman Joe Baca? Many are afraid to share his documented history of bullying developers, credit unions, and city council members. These transgressions reward his financial contributors such as TELACU. After the San Bernardino Mayor and the City Council received a pointed letter from the congressman, the developer was granted approval to build a 90-unit, three-story housing complex at the corner of Highland and Central avenues. ("SB council approves senior-housing plan" SB Sun, 03/17/2008) Nepotism prevails when public officials under pressure endorse his sons with each run for a political office.

Publicly revealing what many know to be true has recently cost me my job with U.S. Senator Barbara Boxer. Why stop now? Together we must reject the tradition of supporting an incumbent for the sake of political expediency.

Congressional candidate, Joanne Gilbert, provides us with an opportunity to challenge the Baca family dynasty. We need someone who works for us. Residents of the Inland Empire must demand more. For more than eight years, Joe Baca has "worked" to promote the lives of his family, a select few, and himself.

It is time for a change. Who is going to be a champion for our children, our communities and the overall welfare of our citizenry? Share the truth about Joe Baca with your friends, family and neighbors. End the lies, threats, and attacks of this divisive figure. The time has come to reclaim both our courage and our community.

“Donda West Law” is Introduced

Following the death of Kanye West's mother, a bill proposed by Assembly Member Wilmer Amina Carter (D-Rialto) on behalf of a Colton family member would require medical clearance for elective cosmetic surgery

The Black Voice News

SACRAMENTO

The Colton, California niece of Donda West, the mother of Kanye West, who died following cosmetic surgery, has sought out 62nd District State Assembly Member Wilmer Amina Carter (D-Rialto) to introduce legislation calling for a requirement that any person, prior to undergoing elective cosmetic surgery, have a medical clearance from a licensed physician.

The proposed legislation, which is called the "Donda West Law", is now Assembly Bill 2968. Yolanda Anderson, who has lived in Colton since 1984, has said that after her aunt died on November 10, 2007, "We felt this is something we wanted to do to make sure her death wouldn't be in vain. We don't want to let it happen to other families. We've spoken to Kanye and he's very enthusiastic about it."

"We felt this is something we wanted to do to make sure her death wouldn't be in vain. We don't want to let it happen to other families. We've spoken to Kanye and he's very enthusiastic about it."

The 58-year-old West is reported to have suffered complications that led to her death following an abdominoplasty (tummy tuck) and breast reduction, which was performed by a Beverly Hills plastic surgeon. She apparently had not heeded medical advice from a different plastic surgeon to get a clearance due to a pre-existing medical condition. The Los Angeles County coroner's report, as of Jan. 10, 2008, said that West died of "coronary artery disease and multiple post-operative factors due to or as a consequence of liposuction and mammoplasty...but the final manner of death could not be determined."

When her niece, Anderson, a property manager, decided to pursue her idea for a law, her husband John, a basketball coach at Wilmer Amina Carter

High School in Rialto, suggested that they contact the legislator, for whom the high school is named. When Yolanda Anderson contacted Assembly Member Wilmer Amina Carter's Rialto office in late November, Carter felt that she should enter her idea in her districtwide contest called, "It Ought to Be a Law."

The winner of the contest, which ended November 30, 2007 would see his or her idea introduced as a bill in the 2008 legislative session and then have the opportunity to participate in the legislative process.

The "Donda West Law" was selected from all the fine entries, Carter said.

"I received many thoughtful legislative ideas, but the proposal from the Andersons is timely and definitely needed in order to better protect our citizens from unnecessary bodily trauma that could result from elective cosmetic surgery, if they are not physically fit to undergo surgery," Carter said. "This is not directed at the many good plastic surgeons out there who require that their patients have a medical clearance before they perform elective cosmetic surgery. But it's not a requirement by law, and this will address those who may not require the clearance."

Yolanda Anderson of Colton, niece of the late Donda West and cousin to Kanye West, visits with Assembly Member Wilmer Amina Carter during her March 19 Open House in Rialto, which was attended by 200 people. On behalf of Anderson and Kanye West's family, Assembly Member Carter has introduced Assembly Bill 2968, called the Donda West Law, which would require that any person, prior to undergoing elective cosmetic surgery, have a medical clearance from a licensed physician.

SCE Celebrates Women's History Month By Recognizing Employee Lisa Cagnolatti

The Black Voice News

ROSEMEAD

Lisa Cagnolatti

As part of its celebration of National Women's History Month, Southern California Edison (SCE) is recognizing employee Lisa Cagnolatti for the leadership qualities she displays at work and in the community.

Cagnolatti exemplifies the company's tradition of community service and reaching out to the diverse communities served by SCE, said Frank Quevedo, SCE's vice president for equal opportunity.

"We're proud of employees like Lisa Cagnolatti, women who hold themselves to high standards and are positive influences both at work and in their communities," Quevedo said. "We're recognizing all of our female employees this month, including African Americans, for their courage, spirit, and contributions to our company's success."

Cagnolatti was recently elected vice president of SCE's business customer division, part of its customer service business unit. Though representing only 300,000 of SCE's 4.8 million customers, that segment can represent as much as two-thirds of the electricity being supplied at a given time by the company.

Cagnolatti joined SCE in 1996 and has held a variety of duties with the company in a broad range of management positions. She previously was the director of the company's call center operations, an organization of approximately 700 employees providing service 24 hours a day, seven days a week. SCE's call centers handle approximately 12 million calls per year.

Before that, she was the director of SCE's billing, payment, and credit activities; a region manager in the company's power delivery and construction organization; and the manager of SCE's rural district organization, which encompasses approximately 39,000 miles and serves 150,000 customers, some of who also get water and gas from SCE.

Before joining SCE, Cagnolatti worked 11 years with Southern California Gas Co. in a variety of positions, including sales manager and account executive. She also worked in environmental and regulatory affairs. Cagnolatti worked two years for Procter & Gamble before joining the Gas Co.

Cagnolatti, who earned a degree in chemical engineering from the University of California, Los Angeles, and an MBA in chemical engineering from Pepperdine University, lives in Diamond Bar with her husband and two sons in Diamond Bar. She is a member of the Council of African American Parents, as well as Leadership California, a network of accomplished women dedicated to advancing the leadership roles women play in business, society, and public policy.

SCE has consistently been ranked in Fortune magazine's annual survey of the top companies for ethnic minorities in America. Information on employment opportunities at Southern California Edison is at www.edisonjobs.com.

MetLife Offers Free "Life Advice" To Help Families Build Financial Freedom

The Black Voice News

LOS ANGELES

MetLife offers free Life Advice to help individuals and families start off the New Year with a renewed focus on personal finance matters. Whether individuals and families resolve to start a business or secure their legacy with life insurance, MetLife has multiple resources to help.

"The beginning of a new year is a great time to assess your financial picture and commit to building wealth within your family and community, and having the right support in place will ensure your success," said Dwight Raiford, senior financial planner, MetLife. "The best way to start is to arm yourself with as much information as possible, even before you sit down with a financial advisor."

In partnership with a host of experts, MetLife's Life Advice program provides free, easy-to-use information to help families take charge of their finances and build a personal safety net. MetLife's Life Advice program offers more than 35 brochures and a comprehensive website (www.metlife.com/lifeadvice) with free financial advice. The award-winning program is meant to support individuals through life's opportunities and challenges—both the expected and the unexpected. Topics covered include:

- Life Transitions: Getting married? Becoming a parent? About to retire? Tips on how to make the most of it.
- Family: From childcare to getting a driver's license, how to do what's right for those you love.
- Financial: Financial planning for college, buying a home, enjoying retirement, or even all three at once.
- Health: How to make smart healthcare decisions, help save a life and more.
- Major Purchases: Get the facts before you rent an apartment, or buy a home, car, or boat.

- Business/Legal: How to start, run and sell a business, plus information on choosing an attorney and the legal system.
- Disaster Preparation: Protecting your family and possessions from earthquakes, fires, floods and storms.
- Insurance Basics: Do you know what it takes to adequately protect you, your family, car and home?
- Calculators & Tools: Use our interactive tools to make more informed decisions about insurance and other financial matters, and home improvement, too.

Individuals may access Life Advice resources at www.metlife.com/lifeadvice or call 1-800-METLIFE (1-800-638-5433) to order Life Advice brochures. Callers may request up to three brochures, free of charge, each time they call.

PUBLIC NOTICE THE UNITED STATES ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY BEGINS FIVE-YEAR REVIEW OF CLEANUP AT THE NEWMARK GROUNDWATER CONTAMINATION SUPERFUND SITE

The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has begun the initial five-year review of cleanup actions undertaken at the Newmark Groundwater Contamination Superfund site (Site), in San Bernardino, California. The review will evaluate whether the cleanup actions for groundwater at the Site remain protective of human health and the environment.

THE REVIEW PROCESS

Superfund law requires the US EPA to evaluate the protectiveness of remedial systems every five years during the period of cleanup. This five-year review, the first for the Site, will address the protectiveness of groundwater cleanup actions taken at the Site. Upon completion of the review, a copy of the final report will be placed in the local information repository listed below and a notice will appear announcing the completion of the Five-Year Review Report in the local paper.

THE ISSUE AND SOLUTION IMPLEMENTED

The primary objective of the review is to assure that the cleanup activities undertaken to address the contamination of the Aquifer are protective of both human health and the environment. The cleanup goals established for the Site by a Record of Decision include inhibiting the groundwater plume from spreading and ensuring the supply of treated water meets drinking water standards established by both the Federal government and the State of California. To achieve these goals, the groundwater is extracted from wells and treated to remove Site contaminants before the water is supplied to area residents and businesses. The five-year review will evaluate the short- and long-term protectiveness of the continuing cleanup actions to ensure protection of human health and the environment. This site will continue to be monitored and five-year reviews will continue until the Site has been sufficiently cleaned up to allow unrestricted use.

COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT

As a part of this five-year review process, the EPA will conduct community interviews. If you are aware of any problems or have any concerns with the remedy and would like to participate in the interviews, please contact either Russell Smith with the City of San Bernardino or Luis Garcia-Bakarich with the US EPA; contact information below. If you would like to be included in our mailing list and receive the fact sheet, please contact Luis Garcia-Bakarich with the US EPA; contact information below.

JOBS

emigrated from Haiti in 2001.

For many, the nature of part-time work is changing. Take the Inland Empire, a national epic center in the housing meltdown. Here more and more people are working part-time jobs for economic reasons, rather than by choice.

The U.S. Department of Labor reported last week that the number of people working part-time rose by 100,000 in February for the second month in a row bringing it to 4.79 million compared to 4.13 million a year ago, and the highest since 1993.

"Increasingly, part-time paychecks are going in gas tanks, grocery bags and helping defray healthcare costs," federal labor officials said. Some Inland homeowners, many of whom are teetering on the brink of foreclosure, are taking on second jobs to stay afloat.

Raoul works as many as 65 hours a week. Her Corona employer gives her a small gasoline allowance plus health and retirement benefits.

The booming part-time workforce is largely fueled by women, who have overtaken men to make up the majority of the multiple-job market for the first time according to a labor bureau study.

A big factor is the fast growing retail sector, which has felt more pressure to use part-time workers since many supermarkets and big box chains started staying open for extended hours in the 1980s and 1990s. Last month the sluggish economy created more part-time jobs than full-time jobs paying health and retirement benefits.

The part-time world is getting tougher, says U.S. retailer's biggest trade group, the National Retail Federation. To cut costs, many retailers are increasingly weighing their staff toward part-timers says Daniel Butler, vice president of retail operations. "A shift by more customers to night and weekend shopping has created an alternative job market for part-timers who are not paid benefits."

While the booming part-time job market is a godsend for some it is an albatross for those who are holding those jobs out of necessity.

Part-time jobs typically pay 10 to 20 percent less per hour than comparable full-time work. Often they offer no health or retirement benefits and little job security, though some part-timers work as many as 35 hours a week.

Raoul has seen her transportation, health and food costs skyrocket and with no end in sight she's pondering yet another part-time job. Sometimes I have Tuesday and Wednesday off. Sometimes I only have one day off a week, she says. "It varies."

As the economy worsens, Raoul doesn't see her fortunes improving. "I don't see a magic bullet on the horizon. I'm taking what I can get. I pray my family understands. It's the only way I can keep gas in the car and food on the table," said Raoul.

"This reminds me of the hard life back in Haiti, no rest just work. I don't believe in going on welfare. So I have no choice but to work more."

can circulate to smaller museum spaces, civic buildings and universities.

Moses, who was president of the American Anthropological Association when discussions about the RACE project began in the late 1990s, will co-chair the smaller exhibit's advisory group and serve as co-editor of the companion book.

"America is ready to have a substantive conversation about race, as witnessed by the dialogue around Barack Obama's recent speech on race," said Moses, who also is associate vice chancellor for diversity and excellence and vice provost, conflict resolution. "This project will provide educational information on this most important topic to more Americans than ever."

The original RACE project, a 5,000-square-foot exhibit, opened at the Science Museum of Minnesota in January 2007. Since then, more than one million people have explored the exhibit and related Web site. The interactive exhibit, which is booked at museums around the country through 2012, addresses race and racism from the viewpoints of science, history and lived experience.

Moses also has been named to the editorial board of the new journal Sustainability: The Journal of Record, which aims to be the conduit for universities, business communities, foundations, government agencies and environmental leaders to share information and foster collaboration.

myself - who were new to working in broadcasting - and he was kind and gentle, just like a teddy bear, even when giving you the "bad news" about your performance."

"Please keep his family and friends in your prayers. He's really going to be missed."

Wofford attended Rubidoux High School and Riverside Community College.

He is survived by his brothers: Joseph

Miller Girls Win CIF Title

CIF CHAMPS - The AB Miller Lady Rebel basketball team and staff after winning their second CIF-2AA Title.

The Black Voice News

LONG BEACH

By Gary Montgomery
Staff Writer

Inland Empire Basketball had a banner year, sending a record number of participants to the CIF

Championships this year.

No program exemplifies the journey better than the Fontana Millers' Girls program. After winning its first title last season and getting bounced from the State playoffs in the first round by perennial favorite Long Beach Poly, the Rebels may not have taken Saturday's win for granted but were clearly looking for something bigger.

The Rebels relentless offensive attack put Los Osos' star Cierra Warren in foul trouble early and forced the Grizzlies to look elsewhere for its offense. With Warren on the bench, Miller was able to establish a lead and keep it most of the game.

Los Osos' only lead came early in the third quarter at 27-24. Their lead was quickly extinguished by Chloe' and Lola Wells when they hit back-to-back three pointers to regain the lead and control of the game.

"It's been a long journey to get to this point. When I started here seven years ago my goal was just to get our team here," said head Coach Mel Wilkins. "I knew that the Inland Empire had the talent, it was just a matter of getting it done and I think we've done that."

Coach Wilkins' success has obviously become contagious; there were seven girls' teams from the Inland Empire in this year's championship. Joining Fontana Miller in this year's finals were; Rancho Cucamonga Los Osos, Chino Hills Ayala, San Bernardino Cajon, Fontana Summit, Ontario Colony and Ontario Chaffey.

"We're not done yet, the CIF has set up the state playoffs to start Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, Saturday, we have a lot more, work to do," said Wilkins.

So far, the Rebels have defeated Stockdale and Long Beach Millikan and will play Long Beach Poly on Thursday in the Semi-Final game of the state playoffs.

Our Bodies

Dr. Ernest
LEVISTER, JR.
F.A.C.P. F.A.C.P.M.

Chronic Cough At Night

Dear Dr. Levister: I've been coughing a lot mostly while lying down at night. What causes this?

Chronic coughs have many causes, but these are the four most common: If you cough during the first hour after you lie down, especially if you suffer from heartburn, the cough may be due to GERD (gastroesophageal reflux disease). If you cough in the wee hours of the morning, especially if you also have chest tightness or shortness of breath, the cough is more likely due to asthma. If you cough right after getting out of bed and you are a smoker, then it may be due to chronic bronchitis. If you cough most of the day and have halitosis (bad breath) and hay fever or sinusitis, it's more likely due to post nasal drainage. Also, having a cold can cause postnasal drip and coughing which is made worse at night because you are lying down.

How do you tell? Talk with your doctor. If you have GERD, he or she may recommend a medication that blocks stomach acid production for several weeks to see if the cough goes away. If you have asthma it can usually be diagnosed with breathing tests. Postnasal drip can be detected easily by using a light to look for mucus running down the back of your throat.

If you have a cough or sinus drainage from a common cold or flu, try propping your head up at night. Extra pillows help keep airways open and free of the mucus that triggers coughing.

Family Talks

Social compassion is indicated among successful people by the degree to which they do what they can to provide Selfless Service to the needy members of a community. Truly Needy members are those who are needy because of circumstances beyond their control: are unable to help the giver in any way; and who may reject or abuse what is given. They are to be distinguished from the Self-Made Needy who are too lazy to do what they have to do to rise above poverty.

As students at Meharry Medical School (Nashville, Tennessee) we were taught to give back 30% in free time to the truly needy in the community. "Constructive 'We/I' people (individualist with a 'We' orientation)—who broke "hand holding" rank with most relatives, peers, and friends in order to follow and achieve their ambitious dreams—typically are driven to return to help lift others in the Black community. But there is probably no more difficult question in ones social life than to decide: "What is the best method for giving?"

For some, it is Unconditional Love. For some it is doing a little bit everyday to improve the lives of others on the positive scale. For some, it is trying to ease troubles on the negative scale. What one decides to do, if any thing, reflects the nature and strength of ones character because to effectively and efficiently help is very, very difficult. Furthermore, to get needy people to accept outsiders help and benefit from it is even harder. Then there are problems with the method. Do you give them a fish so they can eat today? Or, do you teach them how to fish so they can eat according to their work output? Do you take them to the lake and leave them there to figure things out for themselves or do you provide them with things they need so that they can do trial-and-error? Or, do you take something away and give them a swift kick to get them awake? Do you give them what they want so that they will have pleasure for the moment or do you give them what they need but are not likely to even consider? Teachers have a problem deciding whether to gear their course materials to the slowest, to the average, or to the brightest. What is best? No one has the right answer and different approaches and methods apply to different individuals—and even to the same individual at different times.

Giving Back To The Community

What I believe is that only a very few people really want to be helped—as indicated by them already struggling to help themselves. Some of those on the higher rungs of the social ladder need to sharpen certain things (e.g. Rational Thinking skills). In my experience, they respond quickly to coaching. Almost all of those who are chronically struggling need a change in their belief system—particularly to shed the effects of the Enslaved Mind practices attributable to slavery and to switch to the ideal. My observations suggest that the very nature of some of the Enslaved Mind practices prevent them from doing what it takes to start, continue, or complete the task.

Certain Black Community organizations (e.g. the Black Muslims) have used very effective and efficient methods on resistant Black Americans and their methods need to be spotlighted—and analyzed to see what works and why. Then extract the principles so that they can be customized for wide application. Because historically Africans and their descendants have been and remain a traditional people, what would seem to work best—based upon my observations and experiences—is to do things of progress as a group. How this works has been well explained in the African Age-Set system by Kenyatta (Facing Mt. Kenya).

Joseph A. Bailey, II, M.D.

The Easter Bunny and the Easter Egg-Hunt Tradition

Of all the symbols of Easter, none is more common than the Easter Bunny. The first documented use of the bunny as a symbol of Easter appears in Germany in the 1500s, although the actual matching of the holiday and the hare (bunny) was probably a much earlier folk tradition. In Germany tales were told of an "Easter hare" that laid eggs for children to find. German immigrants to America -- particularly Pennsylvania -- brought the tradition with them and spread it to a wider public.

Not surprisingly, it was also the Germans who made the first edible Easter Bunnies in the Easter Eggs. In Medieval Europe, eggs were forbidden during Lent because eggs are a dairy product. Eggs laid during that time were often boiled or otherwise preserved. It was also traditional to use up all of the household's eggs before Lent. Eggs were thus a mainstay of Easter meals, and a prized Easter gift for children and servants.

The coloring of eggs is an established art, and eggs are often dyed, painted, and otherwise decorated. Eggs were also used in various holiday games: parents would hide eggs for children to find, and children would roll eggs down hills. These practices live on in Easter egg hunts and egg rolls. The most famous egg roll takes place on the White House lawn every year.

At the Passover Seder, a hard-boiled egg dipped in salt water symbolizes both new life and the Passover sacrifice offered at the Temple in Jerusalem. The egg is widely used as a symbol of new life just as a chick might hatch from the egg. It is believed that for this reason many ancient cultures used eggs during their spring festivals. The Easter egg tradition may have celebrated the end of the privations of Lent in the West.

Another Orthodox tradition is the presenting of red colored eggs to friends while giving Easter greetings. The egg is seen as symbolic of the grave and life renewed by breaking out of it. The eggs dyed red supposedly symbolizes the blood of Christ redeeming the world and our regeneration through the bloodshed for us by Christ. The egg itself is a symbol of the Resurrection: while being dormant it contains a new life sealed within it.

Children in San Bernardino County need to know that the community cares about them. Join the staff and volunteers of C.A.S.A. Child Advocates of San Bernardino County as we celebrate children in recognition of April as Child Abuse Prevention and Awareness Month. San Bernardino Mayor Patrick Morris and Judge Slough will be on hand to speak about the importance of caring for the children in our community. Enjoy performances from local area youth and dinner for the first 200 walkers will be provided courtesy of In-Out Burger.

Meet at the C.A.S.A. office at 555 N. "D" Street at 5pm for registration on Tuesday April 1st. The Walk begins at the C.A.S.A. office and concludes 2 1/2 blocks down "D" Street at City Hall. Upon arrival at City Hall where attendees will enjoy performances from local youth and words from Mayor Morris and Judge Slough. Bring the family. To learn more about the Walk with C.A.S.A. event contact the C.A.S.A. office at 909.881.6760

Bishop Keith Butler spoke about the "Good Shepherd" John 10:11. He said the day is coming when you're going to either follow the Shepherd or go your own way. But I'm here to tell you, your way will lead you to trouble. As sheep, our goal should be to follow "The Shepherd." There is only one Shepherd, and his name is Jesus.

HELLO MORENO VALLEY!

The City Council may allocate $41.5 million dollars for a Library and a park. The City

Baptist Church, located at 263 East Dumas Street, San Bernardino under the leadership of Pastor Jon S. Harris will host a press conference honoring Miles Dean, African American Pioneer Cowboy and Educator traveling on horseback from New York to California.

Mr. Dean set out on this journey to draw attention and celebrate the achievements of African American Ancestors in the exploration, expansion and settlement of the United States. Dignitaries such as San Bernardino elected officials, State Senator Mark Ridley Thomas, actor Glen Turman, and a host of other African American Cowboys and Riding Organizations were invited.

Castle Rock will celebrate Mr. Dean's "ride" by bringing attention to the Inland Empire through this press conference by providing him with a Heroes Welcome. The following day, the church service will be held and dedicated in his honor. All are welcome to come and attend! The church will also be providing a "Country BBQ" for a small fee.

If you have any questions, please contact Rev. Jon S. Harris at (951) 218-0299 or visit www.blackheritagerider.org to learn more.

Give your all in all that you do. Then the PLUS won't just be more, it will be the difference!

Redevelopment Agency is borrowing this money for six capital projects. 1) $22 million for a new library near City Hall. 2) $6.5 million for Fire Station 110 at Indian and Cottonwood Avenue 3) $5 million for a neighborhood park at Indian Street and Cottonwood Avenue. We have a neighborhood park less than two blocks from Indian Street and Cottonwood Avenue. We have a Fire Station on Indian Street, and we need improvements on Day and Cottonwood Avenue. Write me or call me at, (951) 682-6070 or e-mail to pressrelease@blackvoicenews.com

Starting March 24, 2008 the scheduled street repairs City maintenance crews will be working on Nason Street between the East bound freeway ramps and Fir Avenue. The work, which is expected to last until Friday, March 28, 2008, is scheduled to start 8:00 a.m. and end at 3:00 p.m. Crews will close one lane each way. Allow for travel time in both north and southbound lanes. The area could get congested so the public is urged to use alternative routes.

Moreno Valley, don't forget the 8th Annual Ebony Fashion Show celebrating 50 years on April 10, 2008. It will be held at the Moreno Valley Conference Center. For information call (951) 443-3611 or

(951) 924-9429 or E-mail mvbcc@yahoo.com The funds are for cultural events, youth work force development, education and scholarships.

Executive Director/CEO/Founder Linda D. Wright and her team have been working very hard on our behalf, so let us support the event.

BE BLESSED,
J.B.

Walton | Isaacson: The New Face of Entertainment Marketing

Cory Isaacson and Aaron Walton

The Black Voice News

RIVERSIDE

By Marci Casillas

When you think of Lexus, what comes to mind? Well if you're like most, you think style, class, and an authenticity you can't get anywhere else. And who better to represent the sophistication of Lexus than someone with style written into their DNA? For Aaron Walton, co-founder of Walton | Isaacson, that person could be no other than Alicia Keys, whose luxury rivals that of Lexus. It is this creative thinking that has formed this and many other profitable partnerships, forging the way for Walton | Isaacson in the world of entertainment marketing.

Before W | I, Aaron Walton paid his dues straight out of Babson College as an analyst for Pepsi-Cola, and was soon promoted to brand manager and PR support for local marketing programs on Pepsi sponsored tours for Miami Sound Machine, Tina Turner and Michael Jackson. After arriving from Michael Jackson's fourteen month international tour, Walton was loaned out to other Pepsi-Cola companies to "identify artists that [were thought to] be appropriate to partner with." Wanting to continue his climb up the business ladder, he left Pepsi and created Aaron Walton Entertainment (AWE), where he formed connections with large brands such as AT&T, Banana Republic, General Motors and The Gap.

Walton sold AWE to Omnicom and in 2006 spearheaded a brand new agency with partner Cory Isaacson, now known as Walton | Isaacson, a full service brand building firm with offices in Beverly Hills, Chicago, Dallas and Tokyo. Their goal was to "create the planets most interesting agency." So with some strong ideas to push them forward they decided to "jump off the ledge together and create [their] new company Walton | Isaacson." They were happy to bring on board the sports star and accomplished entrepreneur Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who brought with him a "sense of the urban community like no man I've ever met." Along with Aaron's drive and Cory's intellect, the three make an unstoppable team.

The success of W | I can be attributed to the people. "...we knew that if we picked the right team, we would be able to develop... the most creative way to go to market and to build brands." There is a great diversity within the company and each office feeds off of each other, proving that communication is key. As the only male in the Beverly Hills office, Aaron is thankful to be surrounded by "the angels" or rather the strong women he works with who are "leaders of their own right".

Unique through their own way of combining business with entertainment, W | I creates successful partnerships with "...artists that share similar brand attributes that are consistent and can complement the brand." So it's no wonder that they would pair up Alicia Keys with Lexus, or that Reba McEntire, who has sponsored two Habitat homes, including the first home built entirely by women, would partner with Whirlpool, a company that donates appliances to every home built by Habitat for Humanity. They look for artists that "want a partnership, not just a sponsorship. It's really like, how can we work together to do some amazing things [and] provide an experience that no one else could."

Walton | Isaacson has beaten the odds as a minority-owned company and has dissuaded the notion that only mainstream corporations can survive in the business world. With high-profile partnerships covering the spectrum from Right Gin to Dove brands, Aaron Walton can certainly be proud of his accomplishments and continue to build the skilled reputation of Walton | Isaacson. "People are starting to realize '...there are more things that you guys (W | I) do that we didn't even know about.' And we will continue to do that."

Actress Hattie McDaniel's Memory Honored On Stage

Actress Hattie McDaniel was known for saying "I'd rather play a maid for $700 a week than be one for $7.00 a week." Seventy years ago she won an Oscar. So in celebration of the Oscar winning, the life of Hattie will be portrayed on stage at the Inghram Community Center, located at 2050 N. Mt Vernon Ave.

St. Paul A.M.E. presents Vickilyn Reynolds in "Hattie....What I Need You to Know" directed by Reginald D. Brown. There will be one performance only and only 350 tickets are available for April 19, 2008 at 6:00 p.m. Tickets are available for $35.

Pastors enjoy breakfast.

The Black Voice News

RIVERSIDE

By BVN Staff

Inland Empire pastors were treated to breakfast on Good Friday as part of The Black Voice News and Premier Service Bank's appreciation of their service to the community, partnership with the Black Press, and commitment to God's work.

During the appreciation ceremony, pastors from various denominations including Seventh-day Adventists, Missionary Baptist, African Methodist Episcopal, Non-Denominational and Church of God in Christ were informed of partnership opportunities with The Black Voice News.

The economic power of the church within the Black community positions the church not only as a house of worship, but an economic leader within the community. A survey conducted at the beginning of the program with results given toward the end, revealed that among the 16 churches who participated, estimated bank deposits totaled close to $700,000 per month.

This estimated power stated, Co-Publisher Hardy Brown, "is just evidence of the economic power of the Black Church in our community."

Cal Poly Pomona student and BVN intern Kaylen Coney stated of the event that, "it was informative and nice."

The Black Voice News plans for the pastor's appreciation breakfast to be an annual event. For more information, contact BVN at 951.682.6070.

to maintain and strengthen the nation's segregationist policies. One must remember that both the late Senator J. Strom Thurmond and former Senate Majority leader and current Mississippi Senator Trent Lott were both originally Democrats. Since the 1960's the Democratic Party has engaged in agonizing battles over the role and the place of African Americans within the Party. In 1964 the attempt by the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party to legally integrate the Southern primary system was undermined by backroom deals negotiated by future United States Vice President Walter Mondale under the direction of then-president Lyndon Johnson. In 1968, the racial, gender, and class-based aspirations of younger party members met with swift and violent police action when they challenged the entrenched party leadership in Chicago. During the mid-1980's the phrase "What Does Jesse Want?" symbolized the mainstream Democratic Party's un-readiness to accept an African American at the top of the presidential ticket. Then along comes Barack Hussein Obama—a biracial graduate of Harvard Law School with more intelligence, public presence, and integrity than a generation of Democratic Presidential nominees combined. When he spoke at the party's national convention in 2004 the world took note. Believing that he would be just a feel good story that would help the party energize its African American base and compel young voters to the polls, Obama's victories in predominantly White states like Iowa, Utah, and South Dakota told the party that a new day was dawning. Never able to truly reconcile its definitive history with its idealized public image, especially in the wake of stinging public critiques by Reverend Wright, the Democrats put the blame on

Obama and Wright. It was into this historic context that "A More Perfect Union" was addressed. Taking place in Philadelphia with the spirits of the country's founding fathers looking on, Obama stated that their work in crafting the Constitution was ultimately unfinished because "it was stained by this nation's original sin of slavery". From that point on it was clear that this would be no ordinary speech and that history, race, and religion were all going to be targets. At no point did Senator Obama become the useless, politically correct African American public figure that customarily seeks to please everyone except his core Black constituents. Moreover, his insistence that he could not disown the Reverend Wright, nor his at times bigoted White grandmother finally threw a dose of wisdom and reality into an American political spectrum that has, especially in the era of television, been characterized by meaningless sound bites and over-used clichés. It was his moment and no other political figure in the history of America was more prepared, purposed, or perfect for the task. In fact it seemed as if he had waited a lifetime to give this speech and he took his time making sure that everyone clearly understood his mission. At times he was frank and painstakingly systematic in laying out his argument. Taking a page from Malcolm X, his tone and timbre in the earliest parts of the address were delivered like a professor in a university lecture hall. The fact that he even quoted Malcolm when he spoke about the "most segregated hour in American history" also showed that his 20 years at Trinity United Church of Christ were not wasted at tea parties and church socials. At times a lecturer, at times a confessor, and yes, at times a real preacher, Barack Obama gave the world a full measure of the Black experience with all of its interracial, inter-faith, interdenominational, internally conflicted self. At the same time he compelled the Democratic Party in particular and America in general to finally confront its not-so perfect past. Knowing that he had been called for this specific time and this specific work, Barack

Hussein Obama answered, "Here am I Lord, send me!"

"Here Am I Lord, Send Me!"

Historic Analysis of Senator Barack Obama's "A More Perfect Union" Speech

The Black Voice News

RIVERSIDE

Dr. Daniel E. Walker COMMENTARY

On Tuesday, March 18, 2008 Democratic presidential candidate Barack Obama delivered a speech on race and religion that will be analyzed, reprinted, and quoted for generations to come. Titled "A More Perfect Union",

Sen. Barack Obama

Obama spoke with a level of frankness and heart-wrenching honesty not often seen in American politics. Although some have compared the speech to John Kennedy's address on religion during the 1960 presidential campaign, Senator Obama's confessional is a product of the historic struggle for Black equality in America.

In 1960, John Kennedy was continually faced with questions regarding his religion. Seeking to become the first Catholic elected to the presidency, he gave his famous speech in order to address his critics. While Obama's words came in the midst of a two-three week controversy over comments made by his pastor, the Reverend Jeremiah A. Wright, everyone in America knew that sooner or later the issue of race was going to come to the forefront of his historic run for the presidency.

Although some are a bit surprised that concerns regarding race have come from within the Democratic Party, the reality is that race and the treatment of African Americans has always been a volatile issue for the Democrats. During the early 1800's it was the Democratic Party that stood staunchly against the abolition of slavery. In 1868 the Democratic Party's national slogan for the presidency was "This is a White Man's Country, Let the White Man Rule." Throughout the period of Jim Crow, it was the Southern wing of the Democratic Party, called "Dixiecrats", that fought
